Chasing Light

Jennifer Elliotson

Artist Bio & Statement

Jennifer Elliotson is renowned for her luminous interpretations of the natural world and sensitive exploration of the ephemeral dialogue between light and place. Through richly saturated colour, bright sunlight, dramatic shadow, and an instinctive sensitivity to atmosphere, Elliotson's gestural brushstrokes express the quiet beauty found in our shared landscapes.

Consider the transformative power of light as it filters through the forest canopy, skims across a body of water or settles into the glow of a sunset. Each composition offers a moment of pause, a visual exhale, and an opportunity for reflection.

“ For me, the process begins with quiet observation. I find joy in inviting others to shift their focus to the beauty that exists within their world. ”

Niagara's painter of sunlight, Elliotson, is self-taught and works from her studio in Jordan Station beneath the canopy of a century-old ginkgo tree—an enduring witness to her evolving body of work.
